

BRITISH CLAIM FORCES ARE STILL INTACT BUT HAVE WITHDRAWN TOWARD COAST

Reuter's Reports Violent Battle is In Progress—French Claim
They Still Hold Calais—Berlin Reports Slashing New Offensive Has Split Apart 500,000 Allied Troops

(By International News Service)

LONDON, May 29—British Expeditionary Force, caught in the German ring in Belgium and northern France, is still intact and has withdrawn some miles toward the channel coast, it was stated authoritatively in London today.

British authorities declared it was impossible to say where the British Expeditionary Force now is located, but they stated that the troops have not lost their cohesion and are being supported by the French.

Simultaneously, Reuter's News Agency circulated a report that an extremely violent battle was in progress. It added that French units still held the French channel port of Calais last night. Germany previously claimed occupation of Calais by its forces.

The French channel port of Dunkerque was heavily bombed, Reuters added, but not directly threatened.

BERLIN, May 29—Rapidly moving German troops in a slashing new offensive have split apart the 500,000 or more French and British troops trapped in Flanders and Artois, capturing Ostend and Lille, and have stormed Ypres and Mt. Kemmel to the south, it was officially announced in Berlin today. As in the World War, Ypres and Mt. Kemmel were British strongholds. They split open the final wedge enabling the Germans to pierce and separate the British Expeditionary Force.

The ring of steel surrounding the Allies has been divided into three parts, military quarters said, isolating the French and British forces and hastening "an annihilation."

In the Valenciennes-La Bassée-Lille region, the sack incloses a crack French army believed to approximate 250,000 men. Another cell now created between Arras and the Meuse region has closed between the French and British groups, while a big net from Cassel over the Franco-Belgium border as far as the channel coast has trapped the entire British Expeditionary Force. (Editor's Note: This army originally was estimated at 400,000 men, one-half of which has been, it is believed, evacuated across the channel by the British and are now suffering a hammering by air and land, German military quarters said. Neither the British nor the French have much chance of surviving, it was said.)

LONDON, May 29—Allied forces have captured the northern Norwegian port of Narvik, and official British announcement stated today.

But in Berlin, the German high command conceded that British forces had "entered Narvik from the North."

The towns of Fagnies and Farneset also were in allied hands it was stated. A joint war office and admiralty communiqué said Narvik was captured last night.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 29—Rumania today calm clamped new rigid restrictions on its rich oil fields and placed all military manufacturing centers under police control.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

Republican Dilemma

Washington, May 28.

UNLESS plans are changed the Republican National Convention will meet in Philadelphia three weeks from next Monday. Recently the suggestion has been made that because of the utterly unforeseen war developments, National Committee should be reconvened and the date postponed until early in August. In other words, after the Democrats.

THAT idea has been rejected by Chairman Hamilton. Yet the more the situation is considered the more difficult seems the Republican position, if it is compelled to nominate its candidates and adopt its platform in advance of the party in power. That was conceded a disadvantage four months ago when Mr. Roosevelt cleverly maneuvered so as to force the Republicans to fix their date first. In that period people were still regarding it as a "phony" war and the overwhelming disposition seemed to be that our only concern was to stay out.

RESPONDING to this sentiment, the Republican drift clearly was toward the isolation standpoint. Having the first bid, they were prepared to go pretty far in that direction. Had the war remained as it was in its earlier stage, that would have compelled the Democrats to match the bid in order to avoid being pushed into the fatal position of the war party. But the whole picture has been changed by the desperate state of the Allies and the prospect of a German victory. Sharply the country has swung away from the isolation point of view. Feverishly it is starting to arm. Today the popular tide is as strongly pro-Ally as a few weeks ago it was neutral. All of which puts the Republicans in an extremely painful position.

IN THE first place they will be compelled to nominate in June without knowing what the war situation will be in July, when the Democrats meet, nor what the feeling of the American people as to our attitude will be. So far as the latter is concerned it is a variable quantity. It is regulated by the degree of danger of the Allies. Should the Allies escape

It's All In How You Look At It

(By "The Stroller")

Mirrors in the barn-yard? Sounds preposterous, but the fowls appear to like 'em.

The mirrors, two discarded from the home of Harry Wilkinson, Newport Road, have been set on the ground beneath an open shed. And there a guinea hen has a battle with its reflection several times a day. Flying at the guinea in the mirror, it will peck and peck, then stand back and survey its adversary, then fly up again and start pecking at the glass.

The story of how the mirrors got in that peculiar spot is an unusual one. The Wilkinsons had three turkeys, two of them being gentlemen of the species. One "gobbler" died, and the other "mourned and mourned. One day it wandered onto the porch of the home, and espied itself in reflection in the window pane, tried to make friends.

That gave Mr. Wilkinson the bright idea of placing a mirror near the coops. So today, the turkey makes quite an ado with its new-found pal, while the guinea hen pecks with fury at the guinea which seems so real to it.

FUTURE MEMORIAL DAYS

How long has it been since Memorial Day has been celebrated with a single mind, remembrance of the dead of past wars undisturbed by fears for veterans of future wars?

There has been no real peace for more than a quarter of a century—not peace of mind, not undivided pursuit of happiness and labor, not understanding among nations that makes for security.

And so this Memorial Day that which men have feared for two decades, as they watched freedom and liberty disappear in one nation after another and despotism take their place, has come to pass. The world is aflame and the conflagration is being fanned by all the forces of evil despotism can conjure.

Since before the World War the nerves of men and women have been taut with apprehension. There came four years of horror in a conflict which seemed to have no end. When the Armistice called a halt to mass murder, an interlude of hope and idealism flickered briefly and was extinguished.

During the ensuing years ambitious men exploited "wrongs" by creating imagined injustices. They spread enough falsehood to prevent cool, rational resolution of disputes. They poisoned minds with their propaganda, carried in a controlled press and radio. They dramatized the specious splendor of armed might.

Knowing how the older generation hated the calculated slaughter and bestiality of war, they appealed to the bright imagination of youths who have never known the reality and could not understand even if they would listen.

Year after year wreaths are placed at the shrines of the Unknown Soldiers. American graves are decorated every May. Orations are spoken and prayers are said. But they will be meaningless gestures if the peoples of the world do not conquer the curse cast upon them by a few men gifted in provocative phrase and theatrical posturing, whose will and ability to murder and conquer has darkened the sun that once shone on free men.

In the future stretches a series of Memorial Days. The new significances which will attach to them depends upon the thinking and doing of men and women living this May 30, 1940.

CUTTING CAKE TOO SOON

There is such a thing as cutting a cake before it is baked; and, in the present jubilant state of the Nazi-Fascist mind, it is not surprising to learn that Hitler and Mussolini already are approaching the problem of dividing the prospective spoils of war. A Rome dispatch reports that Mussolini and Germany's colonial expert, Gen. Ritter von Epp, have had "a long talk, presumably on the outlook for colonial expansion of both Italy and Germany."

In view of the fact that Hitler's armies have done the fighting and grabbing while Mussolini has contented himself with making loud threats, some neutral observers may be surprised to find that Hitler considers it necessary to consult his Fascist yes-man about how the cake shall be cut. Those familiar with Hitler's brusque ways might expect him merely to toss Mussolini a small slice, saying: "Here! You ought to be glad to get so much!"

Why insist that Hitler is caused by sun spots? It is as likely to be the other way.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Paired for the first time, Jean Parker and Richard Carlson will be seen as the romantic leads in "Beyond Tomorrow," which comes to the Grand Theatre today. Other members of the all-star cast include Charles Winniger, Maria Ouspenskaya, Helen Vinson, C. Aubrey Smith and Harry Carey.

"Beyond Tomorrow" is being acclaimed as one of the most entertaining and unique films of the year; entertaining because of the deftly woven love story built around the too rapid success of a young singer, played by Carlson, whose love is sought by Jean Parker, the sweet unsophisticated girl, and Helen Vinson, the selfish, cold-blooded type. The uniqueness lies in the fact that three players are seen in the picture in spirit form.

Rated one of the season's most sophisticated and amusing film stories of scandal in high places, "Slightly Honorable," with a cast headed by Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Ruth Terry, and Broderick Crawford, will open Thursday at the Grand Theatre.

RITZ THEATRE

Charles Laughton in one of his rare present-day roles and Vivien Leigh in her first screen appearance since she elicited the year's most enthusiastic raves as the Scarlett O'Hara of "Gone With the Wind," are the noteworthy attractions in "Sidelwinks of London," the new Paramount comedy drama which opens today at the Ritz Theatre.

A handsome six-footer, and former football star at Rice Institute, in Texas, James Craig has the leading romantic role opposite Lola Lane in Universal's adventure film, "Zanzibar," now at the Ritz Theatre.

BRISTOL THEATRE

The Monte Cristo theme which has immortalized those characters of fiction who disappear only to return and frustrate their enemies, is the story of "The Face Behind the Scar" and the new offering at the Bristol Theatre.

The thrills and romance which Zane Grey so artfully stirred into his lively Western plots flavor "The Light of Western Stars," newest of the master's stories to reach the screen under the production guidance of Harry Sherman. With Victor Jory, Jo Ann Sayers, Russell "Lucky" Hayden, Morris Ankrum and Noah Beery, Jr., heading the cast, it will open today at the Bristol Theatre.

Three Points of Interest Listed for Next Pilgrimage

The June pilgrimage of Old York Road Art Guild, on June 7th, promises a visit to the studio and home of Catharine Morris Wright, Glenside; the School of Horticulture for Women in Ambler, and the Scott Studio in Flourtown where many marionettes of Frank and Elizabeth Haines will also be on exhibit.

The first hostess, Catharine Morris Wright, is a woman whose abilities and activities won her the 1932 Gimbel Award for Women. She is a noted artist in oil painting, a singer, a dancer, a poet, and an author. Her husband, Sydney L. Wright, is associate director of the Franklin Institute and director of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. The home of Mrs. Wright, daughter of Harrison Wright, past art editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, is at the corner of Rice's Mill Road and Limekiln Pike, and is a veritable homestead, having belonged to her grandparents, and has been occupied by her family ever since. Old family heirlooms are to be seen throughout the home.

The School of Horticulture for Women, in Ambler, will be a bower of beauty with its rose gardens of 500 hybrid tea roses, Polyantha roses, rare old-fashioned roses, and shrub roses leading the show of its formal small home fruit, and informal gardens. The school is unique, in that it is the only school of horticulture for women in this country. It trains its 50 students from every section of this land in all trends of professional work in horticulture. Its director is Mrs. James Bush Brown.

The Scott Studio, in Flourtown, is the creation of Miss Eugenia Barnard Scott, and her mother, Mrs. Robert Scott, both of whom design, construct, furnish and populate the doll houses, which although toys, are made structurally and architecturally correct.

The "Raglette" dolls, which occupy these one inch to the scale doll houses,

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)

Eternal Father, Creator of all flesh, we give Thee thanks for all those who have laid down their lives for home and country. Bless unto us our Memorial Day. Defend our land from the secret power and the open shame of national sin. We commend our nation to the guidance of Thy wisdom and to the keeping of Thy love. Pour Thy love upon us this Memorial Day, so that war and the contentious spirit shall pass away and the Prince of Peace shall reign. Develop within us a passion for peace. Bring about through us the brotherhood of all mankind. Amen.

are made entirely from scrap materials, thereby deriving their name "Raglette." They are dressed in the latest fashion, and are costumed from the description of clothes worn by the smartest society women.

Frank and Elizabeth Haines, the creators of the only entirely hand-carved marionettes, will exhibit their prize-winning Chinese figures, which they made for their production of Anderson's "Nightingale." These marionettes won first prize in the national doll show, which was recently held in Philadelphia.

NEWTOWN DEFEATS BENSALEM TO WIN THE LEAGUE TILT

Team Earns Victory Behind
Fine Six-Hit Pitching of Al Driver

FINAL SCORE IS 4 TO 2

Game Played As the Result of Protest Which Was Decided in Newtown's Favor

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 29.—Behind the fine six hit pitching performance turned in by Al Driver, the Newtown Indians finally emerged at the top of the heap in the lower division of the Lower Bucks County League when they outscored the Bensalem Owls 4-2 in the final game of the regular season here yesterday afternoon.

The tilt was the game played here May 14th which was protested by coach Al Tomlinson of Newtown and won by the Indians in a decision handed down by Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics Monday morning. And since the Indians turned a previous 9-8 setback into a 4-2 triumph, they slipped out of a tie with Bristol for the league leadership to annex the championship undisputedly for the second year in a row. Newtown finished the campaign with six wins and two losses whereas the Cards of Bristol scored five triumphs and were tossed to third set-back.

SEVEN RUNS IN SIXTH WIN FOR ST. LUKE'S

CORNWELLS, May 29.—Seven runs in the sixth gave the St. Luke's team an easy 11-7 victory over the Diamond boys last night on the Bensalem High School field.

Ad Helveston received the pasting from the St. Luke's team, although in that fatal seventh, his support helped him falter. The Diamond team outdid the winners, 11-10, with Tom Campion leading the team with three out of four. For St. Luke's, Strickler got three for three.

The chief clown, Hank Kleinman, manages the club and plays first base. A few years ago he played first and was in the clean up position for Newtown when that team captured two consecutive Philadelphia League titles. The infield is composed of Sam Mandell, second base; Harry Griver, shortstop; John Kulman, third base, these men all having gained their experience playing in the Philadelphia League. Tink Wendler will be in left with Geo. Smith in center and Harry Swiski in right, and are reported to be pretty good hitters. Lee Yankton will probably be on the mound with Shorty Brooks on the receiving end.

For the "Farmers" Howard Black will toss them up with Jack Broderick behind the plate.

WILSON BOTTLES UP VICTORY OVER DI RENZO

The Wilson softball team snapped its losing streak last night and eked out a victory over the DiRenzo team last night on the high school field.

The distillery boys captured the game in their last turn at bat on a clean hit to left field by Nick Huffell. Previous to this, the paint men had deadlocked the count by registering a trio of markers in the first half of the frame.

A. Gerome was the winning moundman while the losing pitcher was DiGerolamo. Wilson outdid the DiRenzo team 9-6.

"MILT" JONES SHUTS OUT CORNWELLS; SCORE, 14-0

EDGELEY, May 29.—"Milt" Jones, the grand old man of Bristol baseball, entered the mythical hall of fame last night when he shut out the Cornwells A. A. team without a run or hit. It was the fifth straight loss for Cornwells and the final score was Odd Fellows, 14; Cornwells, 0.

Jones was superb as lining after lining he set back the boys of Jim Pettitt. Several reached first because of errors but when it came to dropping one safely, it was out of the question.

would be given. These shows would be for children and the pictures selected with that idea in mind. The pictures to be of outstanding historical character such as "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." Then the oath of allegiance would be shown on the screen and each program opened with the singing of the national anthem. The committee has in mind a plan whereby children might be taught Americanism through the eye, as well as the ear. Small American flags would be given each child.

The first showing of the pictures would start shortly after the conclusion of the flag-raising ceremonies and would continue until the early evening.

The American Legion Cadets will give a drill on the Wood Memorial Field previous to the fireworks display. Efforts are being made to obtain prominent speakers for both morning and evening. J. Leslie Kilcoyne is chairman of the speakers committee and is contacting numerous individuals throughout the State.

The Mill street business men and the Joseph A. Schumacher Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, were both represented at the meeting last night and pledged the full co-operation of their organizations. Marty Green represented the business men, and Charles V. Pierce the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

from their present dreadful predicament and seem to be winning our ardor for defense and our desire to assist would diminish. If Germany should gain a decision, either through the capitulation of England and France or their destruction, popular insistence on defense measures would be greatly intensified. Should the situation late in July indicate a long war of exhaustion then the neutrality sentiment again would become ascendant. Assuming that there is no decision before that time manifestly there will be no way on June 24 of knowing which of these will have happened by July 15, or whether any of them will have happened or how the people will react.

ANXIOUS to attune their platform to public opinion and select their candidates to attract the most voters, the Republicans, if they meet first, will just have to guess on the war and defense issues. And they may guess wrong just as easily as right. They may adapt their action to the sentiment as it exists three weeks from now only to find that three weeks later, when the Democrats meet, it has to be shifted again. This being the state of affairs it seems likely the Republicans will be forced into a straddle on the war. Of course, they will be militantly insistent on defense, sternly indicting the Roosevelt regime for neglect, stupidity and waste, but being vague, general and fluid as to our position toward the Allies. There seems nothing else for the party which has to make the first guess. It must leave itself free and its candidates free to shift with events and sentiments during the campaign. That isn't leadership and it isn't admirable but it is politics. Further, it is exactly the sort of thing the Democrats would do if they had to step out first.

IT isn't only about the war that the Republicans will have to guess. In addition, they have to nominate without knowing whether Mr. Roosevelt is going to run again or not. Most politicians now think that he will, but they cannot be certain. There is reason to think Mr. Roosevelt has planned to keep this uncertainty alive until after the Republicans have acted. Their embarrassment is obvious. For one thing, if they knew that he really intended to run, the main feature of the platform would be the third-term denunciation. Everything else would be subordinated to that. It would become the paramount issue of the campaign. On the other hand if the President, as some believe, intends to resist the pressure to seize a third term, then the Republican platform, with a third-term denunciation, would be ridiculous.

FOR another thing, if Mr. Roosevelt really wants to run, there is a strong conviction that he will use the Republican convention as an alibi. If, for example, it should nominate Mr. Dewey, his friends insist that Mr. Roosevelt would feel it his duty to run in order to prevent the country from falling into the hands of that "little whippersnapper." And if the Republicans make a poor guess about the war or adopt a cloudy plank, he will profess himself so outraged that he must "put aside his personal desire to retire" and make the fight. In fact, no matter what the Republicans do it will be easy for Mr. Roosevelt publicly to construe their action as a reason for running—if he wants to run.
